

BEET MEN ARE AFTER RATES

M. G. Jeffris Appears Before The State Railway Rate Commission In Interest Of Sugar Men.

IT WOULD BENEFIT THE INDUSTRY

Advance Idea That The Road Would Have Much To Gain By The Increased Freight Traffic It Would Cause.

(Special Correspondence.)

Madison, Wis., Oct. 11.—With M. G. Jeffris as their attorney, the sugar manufacturing and growing interests of Wisconsin are before the state railroad rate commission today with many witnesses producing proof of the reasons stated in their complaint why the rates on the transportation of the beets should be lowered and additional conveniences and facilities provided.

This hearing was begun weeks ago, but a continuance was secured and it was shown when the hearing was resumed yesterday that the railroads had determined if possible to defeat the movement on the part of the sugar interests. A formidable array of railroad attorneys and experts on statistics and railroad operation is present to meet the arguments and proof advanced by Mr. Jeffris, but he is apparently impressing the commission not only with the very large importance of the subject to the farmers of the state, but also showing valid reasons for the demands made in the complaint against the existing rates and methods of handling this large business of sugar-beet transportation. It is expected that the hearing will be closed today, but S. A. Lynde, who appears for the Northwestern road, said last night that he was not near through with his side of the case, and it may require tomorrow or longer.

Mr. Jeffris is taking somewhat peculiar position in his presentation of the case against the railroads. He is not simply attacking the corporations, but is laying much emphasis on the fact that by granting the demands of the manufacturers material benefit will accrue not only to the factory men and to the growers, but also to the railroads themselves. This line of presentation is an agreeable change from the cry that was raised in this state and which in part led to the establishment of the rate commission. Mr. Jeffris contends strongly and with persistent reason that the railroads favor the sugar-beet industry, the railroads themselves will share most liberally in the resultant profit. He is showing figures on the comparatively large amount of freight that comes from an acre of sugar beets over what can come from an acre of corn or wheat, or from the acre results of stock-raising. An acre of beets produces many tons of freight, but an acre of corn produces very little in comparison. Mr. Jeffris shows to the commission how a slight reduction of the rate of freight, or a small improvement even in the rules governing shipments, will act as encouragement to the farmers to raise beets instead of planting their acres with corn or grain, and for every acre that is planted to beets instead of corn the railroad reaps the harvest of multiplication of freight. This is the application which the sugar interests are making at every possible turn of the case, and so reasonable seems their position that there is no doubt entertained here that the commission will grant a generous measure of the relief prayed for by the petitioners.

The Chippewa Sugar Company of Chippewa Falls, the Rock County Sugar Co., of Janesville, and the Wisconsin Sugar Co., of Menomonie Falls, are joining in the complaint, demanding lower rates, improved facilities and conveniences. One demand is that the minimum of a car of sugar beets be reduced from 30,000 pounds to 24,000 pounds. This will operate to reduce the rate, and will also be more convenient for the farmers in loading. It is also demanded that the sugar-beet cars be equipped with improved chutes, to make unloading easier and cheaper, but the complainants maintain that this would not only be a benefit to them but also to the railroads in that it would multiply the efficiency of a car. They declare that by providing the cars with this improvement twice the movement can be obtained from it and the delays now experienced will be eliminated. The complainants are represented by Attorney M. G. Jeffris of Janesville. S. A. Lynde is appearing for the Northwestern road, William Ellis for the Milwaukee road, and Jones & Schubring for the Illinois Central. The Wisconsin Central, not represented at this hearing, perhaps on account of the unsettled situation in the administration of that company consequent upon the very recent change of control.

An important witness yesterday was Theodore Hapke of Madison, formerly associated with the factory at Janesville and now superintendent of the new factory almost completed there. He said that he did not think the rates were terribly unsatisfactory, but it would be beneficial to the factories and growers, of course if they were reduced. He said the rates charged in Wisconsin for the transportation of sugar beets compared favorably with those charged in Michigan and in the east. He also said that the improved chute appliance had not to his knowledge worked satisfactorily in Michigan, but he understood that it was being used in Colorado.

up exercises and machine work. The track team candidates have been called out by Captain Ridout and are being given cross-country drill for development in preparation for indoor exhibitions. Baseball died last spring and no attempt at revival has as yet been made. The faculty also held out encouragement for the crew candidates by declaring that all the profits realized from the football season should be expended in the aquatic department next spring. This is somewhat of a joke here, for there are few who predict that the football department will return any profit this year with a poor schedule of five games. In fact, the regents have adopted a resolution agreeing to pay any deficit that may result from football under the "safe and sane" administration that was ordered when intercollegiate championship games were cut out.

REGULATION WINTER STORM IN THE EAST

Severe Sleet and Snow Storms Cripple Telephonic and Telegraphic Lines. Buffalo Cut Off.

(By ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

New York, Oct. 11.—A severe sleet and snow storm prevails over the western part of New York state, western Pennsylvania, and a large portion of the Province of Ontario. Telegraphic and telephonic communication is badly interfered with, Buffalo being entirely cut off from the outside world in this respect. Railroad traffic has not yet been seriously inconvenienced.

In Ohio
Cleveland, Oct. 11.—A storm which swept the city since Tuesday continued unabated today and heavy snow is falling steadily, crippling the telegraphic, telephonic and traction service. John Reese, aged 65, was found frozen to death in his home today.

In Michigan
Benton Harbor, Mich., Oct. 11.—A heavy frost last night which formed ice a quarter of an inch thick on standing water did untold damage in this section of the Michigan fruit belt. The snow last night and yesterday fell to the depth of eight inches.

SPECIAL EMPHASIS LAID ON ATHLETICS

University Faculty Favor the Department of Athletics in Every Way Possible.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Madison, Wis., Oct. 11.—Equal emphasis must be laid on every department of athletics. This is the governing principle laid down by the University of Wisconsin faculty to Athletic Director C. P. Hutchins. As a result of this faculty determination that football shall not monopolize interest, the candidates for all the teams have been called in training this fall almost as early as the candidates for the football team were called out. The crew men rowed on Lake Mendota as long as the weather would permit and are now at work setting up exercises and machine work. The track team candidates have been called out by Captain Ridout and are being given cross-country drill for development in preparation for indoor exhibitions. International Missionary Convention of the Churches of Christ—Other Meetings.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 11.—An army of delegates is pouring into Buffalo for the international missionary convention, for which preparations have been going forward for months past; opened today with Atlanta crowded with visitors from all parts of Georgia and from other states as well. The first two days of the fair are to be given over entirely to reunions. The fair itself is the best ever arranged by the state association. The buildings are filled with extensive exhibits illustrating the versatile resources of the state. The displays of poultry, live stock, and agricultural machinery are especially notable. The racing program inaugurated today is one of the strongest ever offered by a state fair in the South.

FEDERATION MAKES ITS REPORT TODAY

Wisconsin Federation of Women's Clubs Are Closing up Their Work of Session.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Wausau, Oct. 12.—The political atmosphere has cleared at the convention of the Wisconsin Federation of Women's clubs when Mrs. C. J. McDowell of Fond du Lac withdrew as candidate for the presidency. This means Mrs. C. E. Buell of Madison will head the federation. She was the "nominating committee" candidate. Wausau expects the first vice presidency for Mrs. Dr. Margaret Trevitt according to unwritten law of federation and Mrs. Edgar P. Sawyer of Oshkosh, retiring president, will be made general secretary. Miss L. E. Stearns of Milwaukee will be vice president from the fourth district which decided to unify work of Milwaukee Clubs for play grounds and other enterprises.

Mrs. A. C. Neville of Green Bay chairman of the committee on home economics, reported the most important result of the club effort was the passage of the Hepburn pure food bill. The Janesville, Fond du Lac and Green Bay course of scientific study with the American School of Home Economics of Chicago was also discussed. The Madison Women's clubs contributed $500 to equip a department of domestic science in one of the public schools open to all seventh and eighth grade pupils, and the club at Waupaca is doing good serious work. The Eau Claire club employed a woman to go about homes of working classes and give neighborhood demonstrations in cooking.

The Racine club got first prize in the town improvement section for giving twenty dollars, a gold medal and other prizes to school children for raising flower gardens. Wausau, Rice Lake, Waupaca and other towns are among the most favorably mentioned for similar work.

VAUGHAN URGES CLOSER
CHURCH RELATIONSHIP

Janesville Divine Delivers Strong Address
On Correlation Of Christian Forces.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Evansville, Oct. 11.—This evening the Baptist State Convention will come to a close after a four-day session in the Baptist church here. Many good addresses have been given, the usual routine business transacted and good fellowship promoted by a banquet. One of the principal addresses of the whole program was given this afternoon by Rev. R. M. Vaughan of Janesville. His topic was, "The Correlation of Christian Forces," and in view of the general movement toward the closer relationship of the various denominational protestant societies was of especial interest. Mr. Vaughan urged church consolidation more strongly than he did before the Methodist Episcopal conference here. He had many sympathizers among those present here, though he represents the advance guard along this line of teaching. He said:

"I am a Baptist. I have more and better reasons than my friend, John Smith. The other day some one asked him why he was a Baptist. He retorted: 'Why am I a Smith?'

"But even the most strenuous Baptist must admit the presence of Christians of other names. In all there are 163 religious bodies in our country, and it is a poor year for Boston when it fails to add two more to the number. Wisconsin does not have representatives of all these sects, but it has its due proportion. Our population is 2,228,049. The Catholic population, according to their authorities, is 505,165. The Lutherans do not bulk any less; they have the largest number of clergy. It is safe to say that fully one-half of the people of Wisconsin are Catholics and Lutherans."

"The Methodists come next with about 55,000 members. They have about 480 churches whose average membership is about 115. The Congregationalists have 24,326 members in 277 churches. The average church has 87 members and home expense of $945. Last year 44 churches made no report. There are 143 churches which have 50 members or less; these churches raise on the average for home expenses $230. There are 88 churches with 25 members or less. During the last year there were 2,138 accessions, a net gain of 403. 101 churches reported no accessions at all. The Presbyterians have 17,176 members in 194 churches, an average membership of 88. The average church raises for home expenses $991. There are 109 churches with 50 members or less which raise on an average for home expenses $196. There are 65 churches with 25 members or less. Last year there were 1,655 accessions, a net gain of 242. 77 churches reporting no accessions.

"The Baptists have 18,955 members in 215 churches. Each church has an average membership of 88 and an average home expense of $703. There are 96 churches with 50 members or less, whose average home expense is $140. There are 50 churches with 25 members and less. The accessions last year were 5,000, a net gain of 373. 71 churches reporting no accessions. Last year 9 of the churches which reported had enjoyed no regular service for over a year; 14 churches were too weak to have any report. Ten years ago 15 churches reported, which have now become extinct. Between the years 1860 and 1870 94 churches reported which have subsequently ceased to exist. Part of the host have crossed the flood and parts are crossing now. There is scarcely a town in our state without a church of our order, in whose cemetery a Baptist church has not found its final repose. Of 107 English-speaking churches, but 68 are self supporting. In one of our associations every church has fallen below the level of self support."

"It requires but little imagination to see behind these statistics many a tragic story. The long, desperate struggle of little companies of believers, the unwilling sacrifices of a ministry compelled to labor under conditions that break the heart. And in hundreds of instances the cessation of church services and the death of the church.

"The soil of Wisconsin is not friendly to evangelical churches. The rural districts grow slowly, if at all. The cities grow, but not the countryside. And what we are pleased to call 'Americans' are being rapidly replaced by 'foreigners.' The latter constitute about three-fourths of our population. On the whole they are a splendid material with which to build up our own churches. Hear the report of a presiding elder of the Methodist church in southwest Wisconsin: 'It is not an easy task to make a glowing report that will produce a good feeling in the meeting from a district in which so many changes seem to be struggling with the inevitable. The German invasion continues. We have commendable churches in country places where a few years ago large congregations assembled when pastors' salaries were easily paid, and there was a pride in the good record for benevolences. In many of these churches congregations have dwindled to a few.'

"To what extent do the churches of our various denominations occupy the same field? Many of them are in cities and towns where they do not, else, each other greatly. Others in country districts occupy fields alone. But in multitudinous cases evangelical churches are crowded together under conditions that impose ruinous competitions.

"A vacation ramble this summer took me to Fox Lake. I made an inventory of the churches. It is typical of many Wisconsin towns in its ecclesiastical status. There is a popular school of thought which says: 'It is not an easy task to make a glowing report that will produce a good feeling in the meeting from a district in which so many changes seem to be struggling with the inevitable. "A vacation ramble this summer took me to Fox Lake. I made an inventory of the churches. It is typical of many Wisconsin towns in its ecclesiastical status. There is a popular school of thought which says: 'It is not an easy task to make a glowing report that will produce a good feeling in the meeting from a district in which so many changes seem to be struggling with the inevitable. The German invasion continues. We have commendable churches in country places where a few years ago large congregations assembled when pastors' salaries were easily paid, and there was a pride in the good record for benevolences. In many of these churches congregations have dwindled to a few.'

GOOD ROADS CONVENTION.

The good roads convention, to be held next Monday, gives promise of being one of the most interesting gatherings ever held in the city. It will furnish to the taxpayers of the county an opportunity to absorb without expense a lot of valuable knowledge on a topic which is of vital importance.

The men who have charge of this movement are intensely practical. They have no theories to exploit nor untried measures to advance. The knowledge they possess is based on experience of the widest range, and the methods they recommend have been thoroughly tested in 38 states with a record of success in every instance.

It is worth something to rub up against such men and the opportunity to do so is offered for the first time to Rock county people at the convention to be held next Monday.

Many of the towns in the county have good road machinery, but it is not always operated to the best advantage. The best machinery in the world is useless unless handled intelligently, and this is no reflection on the men who are doing the best they know.

The city of Janesville has considerable money invested in a stone-crusher plant, and yet thousands of dollars have been wasted every year on city streets, through lack of expert knowledge in handling it.

The city has as much to learn as the county on this important question. It is no evidence of weakness on the part of any man to say, "I don't know," and it is an evidence of intelligence when he is prepared to say, "I am willing to learn."

The object of the convention is to teach people to help themselves. It should be well attended and if it is results will follow in the way of good roads that will surprise the most skeptical.

ONLY ONE PARTY.

The nation is confronted with a condition so far as political parties is concerned that is both new and novel. The statement has been frequently made since Bryan invaded the democratic party that old-line democracy was a thing of the past, and it is very apparent now that Bryanism and Hearstism represent all that is left of organization.

Hearst himself does not claim to be a democrat, and his string of papers never lose an opportunity to vilify and maligned the old party. Yet Hearst commanded sufficient strength to secure the nomination for governor in New York.

With no party behind him he has massed the forces of unrest and discontent in sufficient numbers to outvote democracy in Tammany and throughout the state.

The same conditions exist in Massachusetts, where Hearst, by the name of Moran, a man who discounts Hearst as a rante, has just captured the democratic party and secured the nomination for governor.

Bryan, on a larger scale, is playing politics with the nation, but he is no more of a democrat than either Hearst or Moran, and no one knows this better than the old-line, conservative democrats.

Just what this conglomeration will do for a candidate for president in 1908 is difficult to determine. One thing can be predicted with absolute certainty and that is there will be no national democratic ticket in the field worthy of the name.

The condition of the democratic party would be amusing were it not so serious, but the country is menaced today as never before with a reign of lawlessness for the success of Bryanism, Hearstism, or socialism means an attack on the foundation of the republic which can but result in disaster and possible ruin.

The republican party is the only thing that stands between the nation and impending peril, and this fact will become more apparent as time advances.

It is a deplorable fact under these conditions that men are urged by reform writers and speakers to throw off the party yoke and declare their independence by joining the ranks of independent voters.

The notion is quite popular that men like Bryan, Hearst and Moran like Folk, Deneen and La Follette, are greater than their party, and so this class of men gain a following.

But what are the results? The democratic party has been swallowed up in the abyss, and the republican party is threatened with the same fate.

Suppose the republican party were dethroned in 1908, and the reins of government placed in the hands of any of the men who stand out prominently today as great reformers, what would be the result?

It is not a difficult question to answer. The nation and the great industries would be paralyzed before inauguration day, and the seeds of socialism, so ruthlessly scattered today, would blossom into a harvest which would blight the nation for years to come.

Every republican owes it to himself and to the land that shelters him to be loyal to his party and zealous in defending its principles. The republican party is greater than any man or coterie of men connected with it. It is the party of progress and of safety. The good hard sense of the American people recognizes this fact and if loyalty prevails the impending danger will be averted.

Whither are we drifting as a nation, is a question which every thinking man can ask himself with profit. The country is flooded with literature of the most yellow hue and the dangerous doctrines taught are eagerly absorbed by a disgruntled constituency. The atmosphere is heavy with fanatical reform and socialistic theories. Time to wake up and see where we are at.

The office of district attorney was a fat office during Governor Denneen's administration, and he is now asked to return some $200,000 in fees. The office is now on a salary basis. Reform comes high in other states besides Wisconsin.

With Hearst howling in New York, Debs in Chicago, Moran in Massachusetts, and Bryan wherever he happens to be the medley is full of discord and yet many people are charmed with the production.

Mayor Weaver of Philadelphia of reform fame turns out to be a weak-kneed brother and his constituency is having hard work to hold him in line. The man of the hour frequently falls down on the second lap. Honest but weak is the compliment now being paid to Mayor Weaver.

Milwaukee needs Bryan more than Janesville does, and so the Nebraska orator will orate in the Cream City. It will make but little difference as to results.

Mr. Hearst is no more of a democrat than a republican. If he is elected governor of New York it will be by the socialists and that pure contingency known as the independent voter.

If the franchise is not defeated it won't be the fault of the men who are determined to kill it.

If the six aldermen who favor the interurban franchise vote as a unit on all propositions connected with it there will be no trouble about its passage.

Good roads for the farmer means a good trade for the merchant every month in the year.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Sellers Was His Name. Charles Sellers was the name of the prisoner who was delivered from the Belvidere jail Tuesday night. He is the individual who robbed one bar and attempted to hold up Frank Joyce as he was closing his saloon one evening several weeks ago. He was convicted on Sept. 28, but owing to the illness of the judge sentence was deferred.

N. & W. Stock Increase.

Roanoke, Va., Oct. 11.—Stockholders of the Norfolk & Western railroad, at a special meeting here today, took favorable action on the proposal of the directors to increase the common stock of the company from $66,000,000 to $100,000,000. This increase in the capital stock, which was made by the road in preference to borrowing the money, is to be used for contemplated extensions and the general improvement of the system.

The road recently has been engaged in considerable new construction and it contemplates further improvements in that direction. The line is being shortened wherever possible, in order to reduce the time between Norfolk and the west.

With no party behind him he has massed the forces of unrest and discontent in sufficient numbers to outvote democracy in Tammany and throughout the state.

The same conditions exist in Massachusetts, where Hearst, by the name of Moran, a man who discounts Hearst as a rante, has just captured

JANESEVILLE MAN IS LOSER IN THE THEFT

Frank Baines' Lost Tobacco Which Was Later Sold by the Prisoner.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., Oct. 11.—After six months of work by officers of the federal court for the western district of Wisconsin an alleged culprit has been arrested in the person of the son of one of the officers of the court. Al Parkinson, son of Bailiff E. S. Parkinson, was arrested charged with selling tobacco without the necessary government license. Another charge is involved, one for the state courts to handle that of the theft of the tobacco in question, but this must wait for the determination of the federal charge. F. S. Baines, formerly mayor of Janesville; a large dealer and dealer in leaf tobacco, made complaint to the police six months ago that 37 cases of tobacco had been stolen from his storage warehouse here. The aid of government records was secured in tracing the cases by numbers and it was discovered that ten cases had been shipped from here, it is alleged in the federal warrant, by Al. Parkinson. He had no license to sell tobacco and as the federal court took action, arresting the son of the bailiff for alleged violation of the national excise laws. He was placed under bonds of $2,000.

The republican party is the only thing that stands between the nation and impending peril, and this fact will become more apparent as time advances.

It is a deplorable fact under these conditions that men are urged by reform writers and speakers to throw off the party yoke and declare their independence by joining the ranks of independent voters.

Mr. Metcalf never married and leaves no relatives except two brothers who reside in the east.

The news of his death will come as a shock to the Janesville friends who wintered with him at Cleveland, Florida. He was preparing to go south again and planning to renew old associations.

Mr. Metcalf was sixty-two years old. For many years he had practiced law, having an office in the Gelleson block. A man of genial disposition and gentlemanly deportment, he won for himself a warm place in the hearts of all who knew him.

Fred Edden will go to the Pacific coast early next month with an idea of spending the winter there and possibly settling in the west. He is spending a few weeks with relatives here after a several weeks' vacation trip through the northern part of the state.

Farmers' National Congress. Moine, Ill., Oct. 11.—Stockholders of the Farmers' National Congress, who have been holding their annual session this week in Rock Island, this morning paid a visit to the United States Arsenal and later came to this city to hold their afternoon session.

Agricultural centralization and marketing farm products were the two principal subjects of discussion at the afternoon session.

Pythian Conclave.

New Orleans, Oct. 11.—Charles F. Shiveley of Richmond, Ind., supreme chancellor of the Knights of Pythias, arrived in New Orleans this morning and established headquarters for the national conclave of the Knights of Pythias to be held here next week.

PRES. EARLING IN JANESEVILLE

HEAD OF ST. PAUL RAILWAY
THROUGH HERE ON SPECIAL.

WHAT DOES VISIT MEAN?

Went to Mineral Point—Improvements and Probably an Extension on Division in Prospect.

President A. J. Earling and other officials of the Chicago & Milwaukee & St. Paul railway were in the city late this afternoon. They arrived on a special train from Chicago at four o'clock and are en route to Mineral Point. All that is known here is that the party is on a tour of inspection, coming over the Janesville & Southeastern branch and proceeding over the Mineral Point division.

Improvements on Division.
There are many other surmises.
One is that the Mineral Point & Northern railway, a local line, will be purchased. Since western Wisconsin has been booming in the past few years this line has been one of the St.
Paul system's best feeders. It is a paying proposition and could be made more valuable as an integral part of the company's holdings.

Extension to Dubuque.

Another speculation, which is possible, but seems nearer the Improbable, is that an extension to Dubuque, Iowa, is being contemplated. This would make the road from Milwaukee to Mineral Point, via Janesville, on a through line to the west. The result would be that through trains would then go over the line and the long-wanted fast service to and from Milwaukee would be an accomplished fact. The extension is considered by local railroad men as one that would vay but the Mississippi river is an expensive obstacle. A bridge would have to be built at a large outlay of capital.

Templar.

The grand commandery of the Knights Templar of Wisconsin held its annual election yesterday, the second-ranking officer being made head and all others being advanced after the same fashion. By this procedure Pitt H. Sperry of Marinette became Grand Commander; Alvin F. Kletzsch of Milwaukee, Deputy Grand Commander; William H. Webb of Superior, Grand Generalissimo; William F.
Kenny of Milwaukee, Grand Captain-
General; George B. Wheeler of Eau Claire; Grand Senior Warden, and John C. Fehland of Madison, Grand Junior Warden. Officers re-elected were: Roman W. Bosworth of Beloit, Prelate; Fred Ring of La Crosse, Grand Treasurer; William W. Perry of Milwaukee, Grand Recorder. Appointive officers named by the Grand Commander were: Grand Standard Bearer, E. R. Thayer of Wausau;
Grand Sword Bearer, A. E. Matheson of Janesville; Grand Warden, William Torrance of La Crosse; Grand Captain of the Guard, John B. Cromwell of Milwaukee; Trustee for three years, A. H. Wagner of Madison; Foreign Correspondent, N. C. Giffen of Fond du Lac. The conclave passed a resolution, subject to the approval of the two Cream City commanderies, inviting the grand encampment of the Knights Templar of the United States of America to hold its triennial conclave in Milwaukee in 1910. The expense of entertaining these big conventions is a large item and falls to a large extent on the commanderies of the city which acts as host. Boston raised $300,000 and Louisville $225,- 00. The next conclave is to be held in Saratoga in 1907. Milwaukee will be the scene of the next conclave of the state encampment but Madison may get it in 1908.

The following program will be rendered at the organ recital to be given at the Cargill Memorial church, Friday evening, Oct. 12th. Prof. W. H.
Donley of Indianapolis will preside at the organ. Admission 50 cents, children 25c.

CHAS. H. DAVIS AND MISS LETA JOHNSON

Were wedded at the home of the bride's parents in town of Union
Tuesday evening, Oct. 9.

Miss Leta Johnson, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Johnson, and Charles Davis, son of Mr. and Mrs.
Charles H. Davis of Evansville, were wedded at the home of the bride's parents in the town of Union at eight o'clock Tuesday evening, October 9.

Rev. James Churm of Evansville was the officiating clergyman. The home was beautifully decorated with vines and pink dahlias and following the ceremony a three course supper was served. Many valuable and handsome gifts testified to the high esteem in which the principals are held by their many friends. Numbered among the guests who witnessed the ceremony were: Mr. and Mrs. Westley Baum and son of Magnolia, J. L. Baum and mother and Mr. and Mrs. John Baum and son of Evansville, Mrs.
O'Neill and daughter, Nellie, of Oregon,
Charles H. Davis of Madison,
Mr. and Mrs. William Davis, Mrs.
James Churm and Mr. and Mrs. Keith Shaw of Evansville. Mr. and Mrs.
Truman Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Jonathan Blackman, Miss Blanche Dennison of Antioch, Ill., and Miss Katherine Earle of Janesville. The happy couple have gone to housekeeping on the Blackman farm near Evansville.

CLOSER CHURCH RELATIONSHIP

not a court for wasteful, and even futile, sectarian rivalries.

The blame for this state of affairs does not rest upon any individual, certainly not upon the heroic pastors of the mission churches, nor upon the noble men at the head of our denominational affairs. We must at present work in the midst of these complications or not at all. It is nobody's fault and it is everybody's fault. Conditions can be effectively remedied only by the development of a better public opinion among the evangelical churches and by concerted action.

"There are three possible attitudes toward the present ecclesiastical situation. In the first place, we may disregard the presence of other Christian churches. Irrespective of their presence in the community, we may seek to establish and maintain a church of our own order. This attitude has conceivable justification. Our Lord bade us go everywhere and preach the gospel. If the pagan Presbyterians and the heathen Methodists do not preach the gospel, it is our duty, at whatever cost, to enter every community and preach the glorious gospel of the blessed God. The policy of disregard has hitherto been earnestly followed. It is, today, the rule of many denominations. As soon as a handful of adherents come be gathered, organize them into a church, launch them on a precarious craft on the ecclesiastical seas, and to it all without consideration for Christian people of other names.

"Another possible attitude is comity. This is an elastic term which may mean anything from pleasant remarks at each other's conventions to respect for each other's fields of labor."

"We preserve our separate denominational organizations, but recognize the presence of fellow-believers and cooperate with them. We hold revivals together and attend one another's chicken-pie suppers. Sometimes we mutually abstain from entering fields already occupied, or even make mutual concessions with respect to fields where we find ourselves fellow occupants." A fine illustration of comity is presented by the churches of San Francisco. They have appointed a general committee, whose duty it shall be, as far as possible, to locate churches in the new San Francisco so that they fields may not overlap. On our foreign fields the principle of comity largely prevails. There is division in territory and even co-operation in labor. For instance, the English Baptists and the American Presbyterians now unite to support a college and a theological seminary in China. Perhaps comity is the most we can hope for and the best we can do is to keep on along old lines and avoid clashes as far as possible.

"But there is, at least, another conceivable attitude with respect to the present religious problem and that is unity. By this term we mean the organic union of various denominations. There is only one kind of unity and that is organic. To see Paul's figure of the human body, the hand is not the eye, but it is related to the eye by an organic bond. There is not identity of substance, but there is vital and visible co-ordination. Many members one body. Certainly, a union of churches must base itself in oneness of spirit. Tying a cat and a dog together does not constitute church union. But a unity of spirit that does not express itself in outward ways is too intangible and elusive for our planet. If the present divided state of Christian people in our communities is church union, spiritual union, one is curious to know what division would be. Perhaps, unity is a far-off and impossible ideal, an upper room prayer for which there is no answer. But some of us are visionaries enough to believe that what ought to be, can be, and some day will be."

"There are, today, many discernible tendencies toward unity. Long estranged members of various families are getting together. Presbyterian and Cumberland Presbyterian, Baptist and Free Baptist. Denominations are also seeking a common organic life. The Congregationalists, the United Brethren and the Methodist Protestants through their committees, have agreed upon everything but the least consequential and the most troublesome thing of all. In Canada, the Methodists, Presbyterians and Congregationalists have taken several steps toward an organic union. In England there is a federation of the free churches which prophesies their ultimate union. Henry C. Vedder, professor of church history at our Spover Theological seminary, says concerning many of the English Baptists: 'They receive to membership any Christians without asking whether they have been baptised or not. From this to the dropping of all denominational distinctions would seem no long step. The federation movement may or may not hasten that which seems as in any case to be probable, not to say inevitable.' And from Japan, Professor E. W. Clement of our Baptist academy at Tokio, that Japanese Christians will not perpetuate the sectarian divisions of the west. They will constitute themselves a united church, Baptists among them, on the basis of freedom with respect to the ordinances.

"In Wisconsin there is a strong trend toward union. At Waupun, we have a union church of Baptist, Free Baptist, and Disciples; at Monroe, of Baptists and Disciples. And the spiritual blessing of God has been upon their work. At Sparta, Baptists and Congregationalists have formed a virtual union; at Mauston, Baptists and Presbyterians; at Ladysmith, Baptists, Congregationalists and Disciples have taken preliminary steps toward union. This movement is certain to spread. Christian people, weary of strife and weary results from labor and sacrifice, are coming together. All the dead weight of our ecclesiastical machinery and all our lust for sectarian statistics cannot keep them apart much longer. Whether we like it or not, we must front the new situation and define our attitude toward it. Brethren in other states may not appreciate our problem, but we are face to face with it and we are compelled to seek some solution.

"In its journey through history the church of Jesus has entered a new historical climate. We breathe a new time-spirit. Every climate evokes its appropriate vegetation, whether in the aridities or in the tropics, stunted trees or towering palms. Every great expression of Christianity is a historically conditioned. Philosophical historians tell us that, relative to the state of human culture when they flourish, all institutions are necessary. The Roman Catholic church, with its assertion of absolute external authority, was needful to the child peoples of western Europe. The only way to rear a child is by absolute external authority. But with the intellectual self-realization of these peoples there came the assertion of personal freedom. Protestantism inevitably arose with its declaration of the self-witnessing power of truth and the finality of the verdict of one's own conscience for every man. Despite its mistakes, the Roman church performed a service of incalculable value. Protestantism with its new-found freedom is once divided into many sects, because only thus could all truths necessary to a complete Christian system receive proper emphasis. Let no one speak disparagingly of the sects. They were a historic necessity. But, like Romanism, they have their day and, like Romanism, their power will be broken. The time is at hand for a new incarnation of the idea of the church. Sectarian shibboleths everywhere lose their power of appeal. The Christian consciousness of our time will not tolerate the divisive cry. A new note sounds in the air, the note of union. And in all the denominations countless hearts respond with glad, quick, throb..."

"Many forces operate to bring Christians into closer organic relations. A better acquaintance tends to bring us together. Ignorance is the mother of conceit and prejudice while knowledge is the mother of tolerance and cooperation. There has been vast increase in the general means of intelligence—books, periodicals, travel, schools. Such movements as the Christian associations, Christian Endeavor, Anti-Saloon League, union, revival meetings, have brought Christians of many denominations into close acquaintance. The result has been the repetition of the experience of William Jay. One foggy morning he saw at a distance a dragon, horrible and portentous, approaching him. It soon assumed the appearance of a giant, fierce and repellent. A few moments later there emerged from the fog his brother John. When we look through the fog of ignorance all manner of misconceptions are possible. But my brother has emerged from the fog and to him, he is as good as I am. He is as honest a citizen, as noble a home-builder, as generous a giver, as ardent a disciple of Jesus. By these tokens, I know that he has all the essentials of religion. And, whom God has accepted by the gift of his spirit, he has accepted by the gift of his spirit, as a narrow-minded disciple learned long ago, I cannot count common or unclear.

"J. Campbell White tells us that when he started to college he thought the Presbyterian church was about the only church worth belonging to and the only one the Lord could rely on for winning the world to himself. A visit to the inter-denominational student conference at Northfield, partially disillusioned him. After two years spent in visiting colleges of all denominations, his emancipation was complete. "It was impossible," said he, "for me to go through an experience like that without finding in every denomination men as Christlike as were to be found in any other, and it was impossible for me to feel that there would be any serious barriers set up between Christians, if they set up between Christians, and the divine order is agitation, education, consummation."

"There are two stars by which we must sail, if we ever reach our haven—loyalty and freedom. There are some things upon which we must all agree. We can not correlate every community there are comparative unity in the life of Jesus, knew the secret of Christian conquest when he prayed 'I pray that they may all be one, that the world may believe that Thou didst send Me.' When the disciples of Jesus are one the world will be won. Is it practicable? Is union of any of the denominations possible? Doubtless, unification will come as a growth and we cannot prematurely hasten the vital processes of the kingdom of God. But God works through men and the divine order is agitation, education, consummation."

"A wider world-view is also, an ennobling force. In all directions the horizons have stretched out. During the past fifty years," says President Eliot, "the world has been made over. Politically, it is impossible for Americans any longer to be provincials; the era of international politics is here. Manila bay, so decided. Astro-physics tell us of a illimitable universe and numberless neons. History, archaeology and sociology give us new conceptions of the grade of human development. Society, by virtue of the subjugation of mechanical forces, has undergone vast changes in organization; it has shifted from the base of individualism to the base of collectivism. The 'social' era has come in good earnest in the life of man. In the realm of religion new questions are to the fore. There was a time when the Mennonites divided over the propriety of wearing buttons or hooks and eyes, a time when monks waged bitter controversies over the shapes of their tresses. In our day, Herbert Spencer tells us that we cannot know God and Earnest Haeckel tells us that there is nothing but dirt. These are issues that strike to the very foundations of all religion. And somehow, as we stand in the presence of the new issues, the questions which once divided evangelical Christians began to shrivel up. They do not seem as consequential as they did before. A new sense of relativity has inevitably come to us. 'There is necessary a revision of the things we account essential and non-essential.'

"A new practical problem also compels the correlation of Christian forces. Civilization becomes increasingly complex. The ways of doing things which met the needs of a simpler time now prove insufficient. A type of work is required for which the resources of divided churches are not adequate. The city, ever growing, is a practical problem of tremendous moment. Protestants are growing weary and ashamed of the retreat from densely populated downtown centers to the select and respectable suburbs. Something seems to be wrong when four churches of our evangelical denominations plant themselves at the intersection of two streets in a pleasant neighborhood while vast areas of the city are given over to ugliness, vice, materialism and corruption. The rural districts also constitute a problem. The people who live there are graduates of the American public schools, which ever grow better, and you can not satisfy them with 'once a month' preaching. It is the problem of the country churches in the new northwest which has inspired the unification movement in Canada.

"Something seems to be wrong when four churches of our evangelical denominations plant themselves at the intersection of two streets in a pleasant neighborhood while vast areas of the city are given over to ugliness, vice, materialism and corruption. The rural districts also constitute a problem. The people who live there are graduates of the American public schools, which ever grow better, and which does the work that needs to be done, is good enough for me. The ideal polity will somehow blend individualism and cooperation.

"The strength of the Pack is the Wolf, and the strength of the Wolf is the Pack."

"Do the ordinances present insurmountable barriers to union?" We know that all through history battles have raged around them. We believe, in common with all Protestants in their symbolic character, we ascribe to them no magic power. As symbols of great truths we account them sacred. But we can not forget that they are symbols. If we could approach the question without prepossessions where would Christian people put matters of symbol in the sphere of loyalty or in the sphere of freedom? If there was agreement with respect to realities would a man with a right sense of proportion think that difference of opinion concerning symbols should divide the hosts of God?

"Personally, I am a Baptist. I believe that our position with respect to baptism is both good scripture and good psychology. The scholarship of the world confirms our contention that the original baptism was immersion. I am aware that the higher critics are at work upon the literature of the New Testament. Auguste Sabatier writes in his epochal volume, The Religion of Authority, 'Was the institution of baptism the act of Jesus Himself?' In the present condition of the text, it is impossible to prove it. They tell us that the only passage in which Jesus commands baptism contains the trinitarian formula and, therefore, the earmark of the thinking of a later generation. But though the higher critics expunge from the New Testament every reference to baptism, which they cannot, I am a Baptist still. I am a Baptist, not because I am a legalist, and in bondage to the Jewish principle of conformity to outward commandments, but because I believe in the religion of the spirit. I am a Baptist for the reasons which led to the institution of baptism in the first place, because it is inherently and spiritually helpful. We have not outrun the helpfulness of ordinances. When the day comes that 'groom and bride can, set up housekeeping more helpfully to themselves and to society without the preliminary sanctions of a wedding, when the day comes that the President of the United States can move into the White House more helpfully to himself and to the people, without a formal inaugural ceremony, on that day we will receive people into the church without the use of an ordinance. If we may believe the psychologists of our time, it is most desirable to make the beginning of a course of moral action definite and emphatic. 'We must take care to launch ourselves,' says William James, 'with as strong and as decided an initiative as possible. But if we employ any ordinance at all, what ordinance is more appropriate than the ordinance consecrated by the Master's example, by the usage of apostle ages, and by its own profound expressiveness?' The cardinal fact in the life of Jesus was death and resurrection; the cardinal fact in the life of the believer is death to the old life and resurrection to the new. When a man unites with the church he pides himself by the free, self-chosen and sacred ordinance of immersion. Until the day when correlation is fully simplified the problem, such correlation also, would release funds for wider missionary enterprises. Instead of being a burden upon missions, the united Christian people of a community could with self-respect maintain the cause of Christ and become 'themselves the source and supply for real missionary enterprises.'

"The spiritual advantage of correlation would be incalculable. In every community there are comparatively few people really qualified to teach Sunday school classes. Their services would be available for all the children of the village in the school of the united church. In like manner also there are comparatively few people who can really sing. Let their blended voices praise God, and inspire all the people in the worship of song. Pentecost found all the disciples in one place and of one accord. Pentecost will come again when we get together. Jesus knew the secret of Christian conquest when he prayed 'I pray that they may all be one, that the world may believe that Thou didst send Me.' When the disciples of Jesus are one the world will be won.

"Is it practicable? Is union of any of the denominations possible? Doubtless, unification will come as a growth and we cannot prematurely hasten the vital processes of the kingdom of God. But God works through men and the divine order is agitation, education, consummation."

"There are two stars by which we must sail, if we ever reach our haven—loyalty and freedom. There are some things upon which we must all agree. We can not correlate every community there are comparative unity in the life of Jesus, knew the secret of Christian conquest when he prayed 'I pray that they may all be one, that the world may believe that Thou didst send Me.'

"It is worth our inquiry, however, is immersion the fundamental ecclesiastical principle of the Baptists? The authoritative exponents of our faith have never so affirmed. To quote one of them, President A. H. Strong of Rochester, 'We stand above all things for the spirituality of the church, at the initial Baptist protest was against infant baptism, because it brought unspiritual persons into the church. It has come to pass, however, in the course of the years that other denominations stand with equal earnestness for the spirituality of the church, although they got at things in a different way.' The Anabaptists were again baptisers not because they employed immersion but because they believed baptism should be a personal expression of faith. Prof. W. J. McGlothlin of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary writes in a recent article concerning them, 'Baptism was usually administered by affusion, though immersion was practiced also.' Our British fathers occupied a similar position, as Rev. J. H. Shakespeare, secretary of the Baptist Union of England and Wales has shown in a recent volume. 'To this day we refuse to be classified as mere contenders for the form of a form. Our insistence,' says Prof. Strong, 'upon the proper subject and the proper mode of baptism is not the essential, but only the incidental, of our belief.' It is a well-known fact that English Baptists do not insist upon immersion as an indispensable requisite to church membership. Alexander McLaren, the foremost living Baptist preacher, F. B. Meyer, president of the Baptist Union of England and Wales, John Clifford, president of the World's Baptist Congress, these men, whom we are glad and proud to claim as Baptists, are, or have been, pastors of churches some of whose members have been immersed and some have not.

"In our insistence upon believers' baptism we have been earnestly opposed to infant baptism, but we are not opposed to the public dedication of little children to God and his service. The powerful appeal which infant baptism has made to Christian hearts lies in its dedicatory aspects. There is something in parental hearts which demands that the church recognize the child as standing in some relation to the kingdom of God. It has been so since the days when Hannah came from the hill country of Ephraim to present her child, Samuel at the tabernacle of God and Mary of Galilee stood in the temple court with the child of promise in her arms. The child is a proper subject for Christian nurture and it is altogether fitting that the church should recognize organization and ordinances. It is scarcely to be doubted that there is among evangelical Christians a body of common opinion which is sufficient to be a covenant of faith. Nor does organization present for some denominations, at least, insoluble problems. Some of them, like the Congregationalists, are simple democracies like ourselves, our divided condition as Christians is due, in some measure, to a sincere effort to conform to a pattern of church government presented in the New Testament. It is now widely believed that the New Testament does not give us a hard wooden pattern of church government, but rather great architectural principles. What we see in the records of the apostolic age is an organism adapting itself to conditions. 'Deacons' were chosen not to conform to a prescribed and immutable form of organization, but to meet an exigency in the life of the church. President W. H. P. Faunce of Brown University recently declared, 'Embryonic forms of the congregational, presbyterian and episcopal order are clearly discernible in the New Testament.' Any form of church government, therefore, which is true to the New Testament principle of the equality of believers, and which does the work that needs to be done, is good enough for me. The ideal polity will somehow blend individualism and cooperation.

If we could approach the question without prepossessions where would Christian people put matters of symbol in the sphere of loyalty or in the sphere of freedom? If there was agreement with respect to realities would a man with a right sense of proportion think that difference of opinion concerning symbols should divide the hosts of God?

"Personally, I am a Baptist. I believe that our position with respect to baptism is both good scripture and good psychology. The scholarship of the world confirms our contention that the original baptism was immersion. I am aware that the higher critics are at work upon the literature of the New Testament. Auguste Sabatier writes in his epochal volume, 'The Religion of Authority'

"Something seems to be wrong when four churches of our evangelical denominations plant themselves at the intersection of two streets in a pleasant neighborhood while vast areas of the city are given over to ugliness, vice, materialism and corruption. The rural districts also constitute a problem. The people who live there are graduates of the American public schools, which ever grow better, and which does the work that needs to be done, is good enough for me. The ideal polity will somehow blend individualism and cooperation.

"The strength of the Pack is the Wolf, and the strength of the Wolf is the Pack."

"Do the ordinances present insurmountable barriers to union?" We know that all through history battles have raged around them. We believe, in common with all Protestants in their symbolic character, we ascribe to them no magic power. As symbols of great truths we account them sacred. But we can not forget that they are symbols. CHAPTER XXIII.

GY OSCARD stood for a moment on the threshold. He heard the door closed behind him, and he took two steps farther forward.

"I made no comparison," the girl cried defiantly, "there was no question of comparison."

She said it shamelessly, and it hurt Meredith more than it hurt Guy Oscar, for whom the sting was intended. "Comparison or no comparison," said Jack Meredith quickly, with the keenness of a good fencer who has been touched, "there can be no doubt of the fact that you were engaged to us both at the same time. You told us both to go out and make a fortune where with to buy your affections. One can only presume that the highest bidder—the owner of the largest fortune—was to be the happy man. Unfortunately, we became partners, and such was the power of your fascination—we made the fortune, but we share, and share alike in that. We are equal, so far as the price is concerned. The situation is interesting and rather amusing. It is your turn to move. We await your further instructions in considerable suspense."

"Are you going to be married tomorrow?" asked Guy Oscar deliberately.

He never was a man to whom a successful appeal for the slightest mitigation of justice could have been made. His dealings had ever been with men from whom he had exacted as scrupulous an honor as he had given. He did not know that women are different—that honor is not their strong point.

Millicent did not answer. She looked to Meredith to answer for her, but Meredith was looking at Oscar, and in his hazel eyes there glowed the singular affection and admiration which he had bestowed long time before on this simple gentleman—his mental inferior.

"Are you going to be married tomorrow?" repeated Oscar, standing quite still, with a calmness that frightened her.

"Pardon me, we are not going to be married tomorrow."

"Her brilliant teeth closed on her lower lip with a snap, and she stood looking at him, breathing so hard that the sound was almost a sob.

"What do you mean?" she whispered hoarsely.

He raised his shoulders in polite surprise at her dullness of comprehension.

"In the unfortunate circumstances in which you are placed," he explained, "it seems to me that the least one can do is to offer every assistance in one's power. Please consider me hôte de concours. In a word—I scratch."

She gasped like a swimmer swimming for life. She was fighting for that which some deem dearer than life, namely, her love. For it is not only the good woman who loves, though they understand it best, and see further it.

There is no light that makes night reading so easy as does Electricity. An Electric Portable Lamp is a source of pleasure in every home—as well as a means of health. Reading by improper light is one of the worst things for the eyes. Get a Table Lamp and read in comfort. Prices from $2.00 upwards.

The Harvest Fields of America

Grow the richest barley crop in the world, and barley remembers a substantial food.

It is the foundation and backbone of a standard cereal like wheat and oats and rye.

Gund's Peerless Beer

Pure natural juices of the barley and hops are combined by the famous "Gund Natural Process" into a fermented malt beer, whose fragrance and rich strength won for it the gold medal of Highest Excellence at Paris, 1900, and for commanding superiority at St. Louis Exposition, 1904.

"Beer is liquid bread." This is an ancient German saying and it truly is the most delicious sense of "Porter." Try it and see. It will quench your thirst, give you strength, promote digestion, and your palate will enrich your blood. Sparkling, whole-some, sparkling and delicious. Sold everywhere. A favorite home beer. Send in a trial order for a case delivered to your door. Telephone, write or call. Ask for it at places of public resort if you want something better than common brews.

Heart Weakness

The action of the heart depends upon the heart nerves and muscles. When from any cause they become weak or exhausted, and fail to furnish sufficient power, the heart flutters, palpitates, skips beats, and in its effort to keep up its work, causes pain and distress, such as smothering spells, short breath, fainting, pain around heart, arm and shoulder. The circulation is impeded, and the entire system suffers from lack of nourishment.

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure makes a heart strong and vigorous by strengthening these nerves and muscles.

"I had palpitation and pain around my heart, and the doctors said it was incurable. I don't believe it now for after taking six bottles of Miles' Heart Cure, the two bottles of the Novine and Liver Pills I am entirely cured, and feel better than I have for five years, and it is all due to these remedies. I cured me. It relieved me from the first dose, and I kept right on till the pain in my chest was gone, and I kept on feeling better over and over again." JOHN H. SHIPRA, Elkhart, Mich.

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure is sold by your druggist, who will guarantee that the first bottle will benefit. If it fails he will refund your money.
